

EQUINE DESTINY

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
March 18, 2010

Equine Destiny has won its first awards at the Los Angeles Reel Film Festival. Equine Destiny began production in early April of 2009, and after 10 months of development, filming and editing, the documentary is finished. It is without question the most comprehensive documentary addressing the problems threatening America's horses as well as the solutions to fix them.

These issues include: Neglect, abandonment, overbreeding, slaughter, Premarin, wild horse roundups, horse rescuers, horse rescue facilities, equine therapy.

Change For Balance Productions and Inter-Nation Cultural Foundation (501c3), along with Mary Behrens, owner of the Huntington Central Park Equestrian Center and co-founder of Red Bucket Equine Rescue in Huntington Beach California, have teamed up to create this important film.

Equine Destiny is shot in all HD, and includes such equestrians as world famous horse trainer Monty Roberts and 2008 Gold Medalist horse jumper Will Simpson. The filming spanned up and down California as well as in Nevada and Arizona.

“We recognized the importance of making Equine Destiny more than just an informative documentary. We made sure to not only educate our audience about the issues facing our horses, but to also entertain and inspire them to get involved,” says Producer Adam Steel.

Equine Destiny is currently entering film festivals throughout the United States. Change For Balance Productions plans to have private screenings in the OC/LA area and are hoping to get it on network TV to reach the largest audience possible.
